Should I buy small Solar panels for travel?

Regardless of the size of your solar panels, ensure that they'll have access to plenty of direct sunlight. If your locale doesn't provide enough sun, you may not be able to rely on your solar panels on an everyday basis. However, this may be irrelevant if you purchase small solar panels specifically for travel.

Should you lease or rent solar panels?

Leasing or renting solar panels is an increasingly popular option for homeowners who want to take advantage of solar energy without the significant upfront costs of purchasing a system. This approach allows you to benefit from clean, renewable energy while avoiding the responsibilities of system ownership and maintenance.

Can I get solar power if I lease or sign a PPA?

You might have the option to get solar power by leasing a system or signing a PPA. When you lease a system or have a PPA, you don't own the system. That means you can't claim RECs and aren't eligible for tax credits or financial incentives. Those go to the system's owner.

Can you put solar panels on a old roof?

If your roof is old, the answer is no--at least not until you replace it. Asphalt shingles that are 10 years old or more should be replaced before adding a solar array on top, says Ana Almerini, a spokesperson for SolarReviews. New solar panels are warranted to last, on average, 25 years, while most roofs are warranted for 30 years or less.

How do you sell excess solar power?

Sale of your excess electricity. In a handful of states, solar-home owners can arrange to sell their excess power to utilities. They sign up with a marketplace that assigns the excess electricity a certain number of solar renewable energy certificates (SRECs); those SRECs are then traded in a marketplace with fluctuating prices.
