What is a solar power purchase agreement (SPPA)?

A Solar Power Purchase Agreement (SPPA) is a financial arrangement in which a third-party developer owns, operates, and maintains the photovoltaic (PV) system, and a host customer agrees to site the system on its property and purchases the system's electric output from the solar services provider for a predetermined period.

What is a solar 'use' claim?

A solar 'use' claim, and associated claims about greenhouse gas footprint reductions, depend on the ownership of, or exclusive rights to, the renewable energy certificates (RECs) associated with the solar generator's output.

Does going solar cost a lot?

Thanks in part to Solar Energy Technologies Office (SETO) investments, the cost of going solar goes down every year. You may be considering the option of adding a solar energy system to your home's roof or finding another way to harness the sun's energy.

Should I add a solar energy system to my roof?

You may be considering the option of adding a solar energy system to your home's roof or finding another way to harness the sun's energy. While there's no one-size-fits-all solar solution, here are some resources that can help you figure out what's best for you. Consider these questions before you go solar. See the Spanish version here.

Do solar panels go to landfill?

Unfortunately there's a catch. The replacement rate of solar panels is faster than expected and given the current very high recycling costs, there's a real danger that all used panels will go straight to landfill (along with equally hard-to-recycle wind turbines).

Can a party claim a MWh of renewable electricity?

The party owning the REC would now have a claim to that MWh of renewable electricity, even if that electricity did not in fact ever reach its facility. Accordingly, RECs provide an exclusive right for a party to claim a MWh of electricity as their own.
